Good evening. We interrupt your scheduled programming with breaking news. Authorities have now confirmed a significant spike in the number of missing persons reported in the last forty-eight hours — bringing the total to twenty-six individuals, all within a thirty-mile radius of the city center.

Police are urging residents to remain indoors after nightfall and to avoid traveling alone. There is currently no official statement on whether the disappearances are connected, but sources close to the investigation have told us the pattern is... unusual. No signs of struggle. No calls. No trace.

The victims span a wide range of ages, professions, and neighborhoods. There's no obvious link. One moment they were here at home, walking their dogs, locking up their shops and the next, they were gone.

Local officials are coordinating with federal agents tonight. Roadblocks are in place. Search teams are combing nearby forests, abandoned buildings, and drainage systems.

And yet despite every effort, nothing has been found.

We will continue to monitor this developing story. For now, please, stay safe. If you notice anything, anyone that's out of place... report it immediately. This is not business as usual.

This is something else.
